DEDICATION

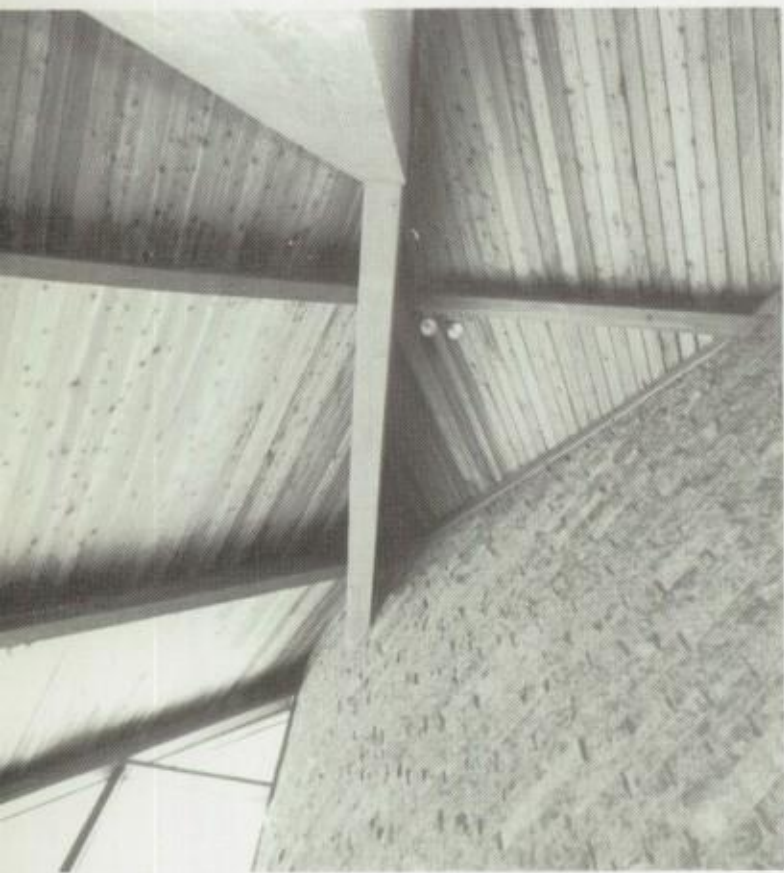

Over the years Breck has undergone many changes, but our traditions and our personalities remain a part of the school. Mrs. Evelyn Arenz is the present symbol of this heritage which runs deep at Breck. A teacher in the elementary grades for twenty-eight years she has many times over proved her skill and dedication to the school community. As far back as 1948, the yearbook said that Mrs. Arenz and her sister, Mrs. Polson, "are members of the fine primary school department and represent one of the most solid units of Breck School." Times have not changed in this regard, and it is such dedication that determines the success of a private school.

But Mrs. Arenz is more than just a teacher. In her gracious way and her pleasant appearance, faculty and students alike recognize a true gentlewoman. As a mother she is justly proud of her son, Ed, a thirteen-year Breck student and a member of the 1967 graduating class.

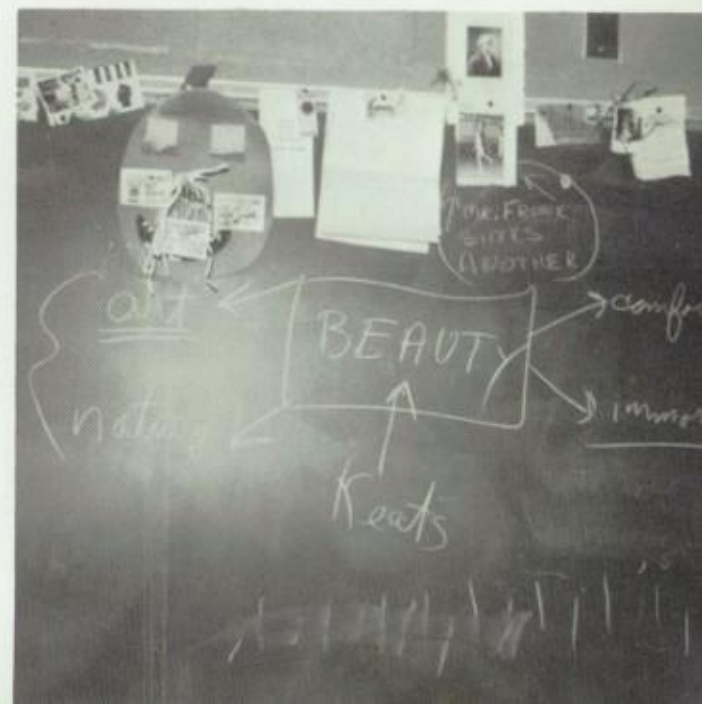

The staff of the 1967 Breck Mustang wishes to thank Mrs. Evelyn Arenz for all she has done for the students of Breck School and offer our best wishes for continued success in the years to come.

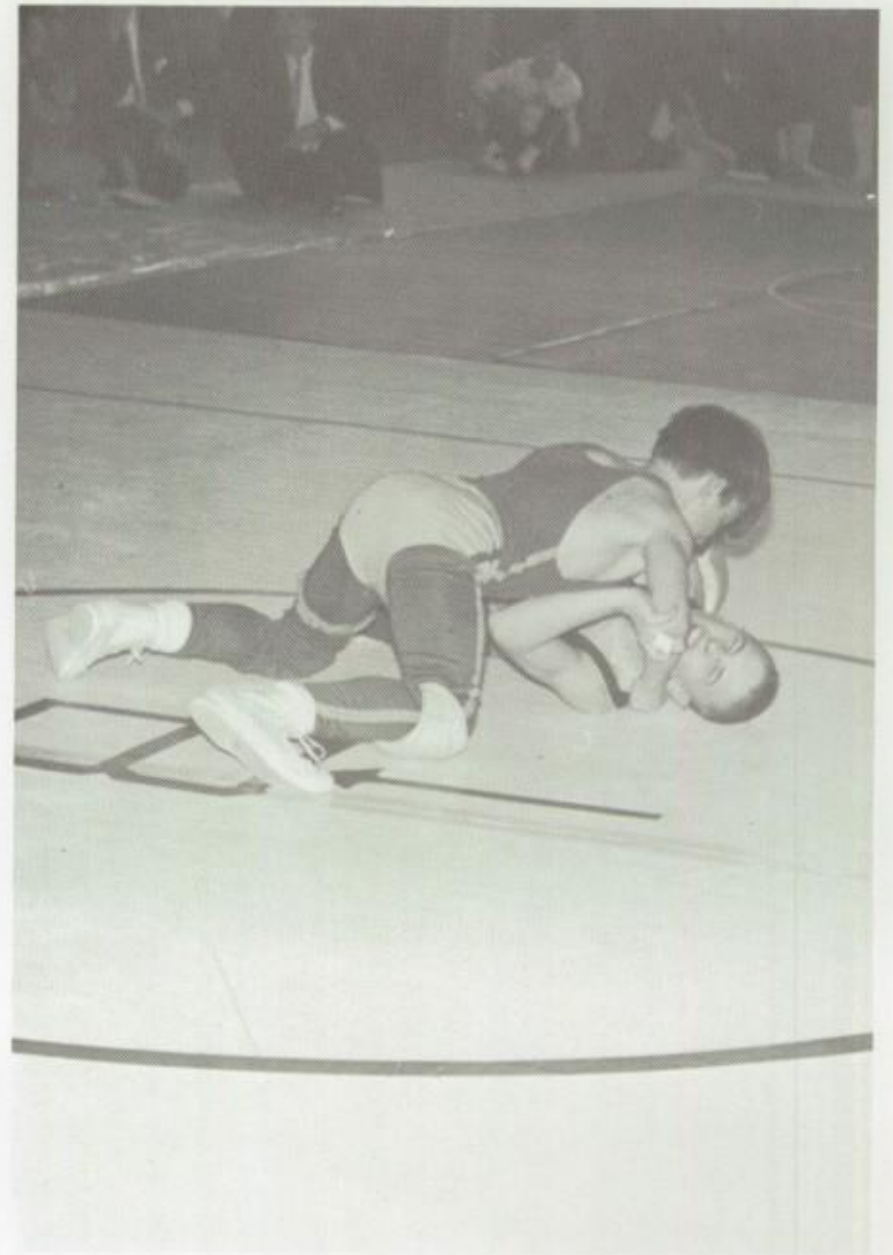

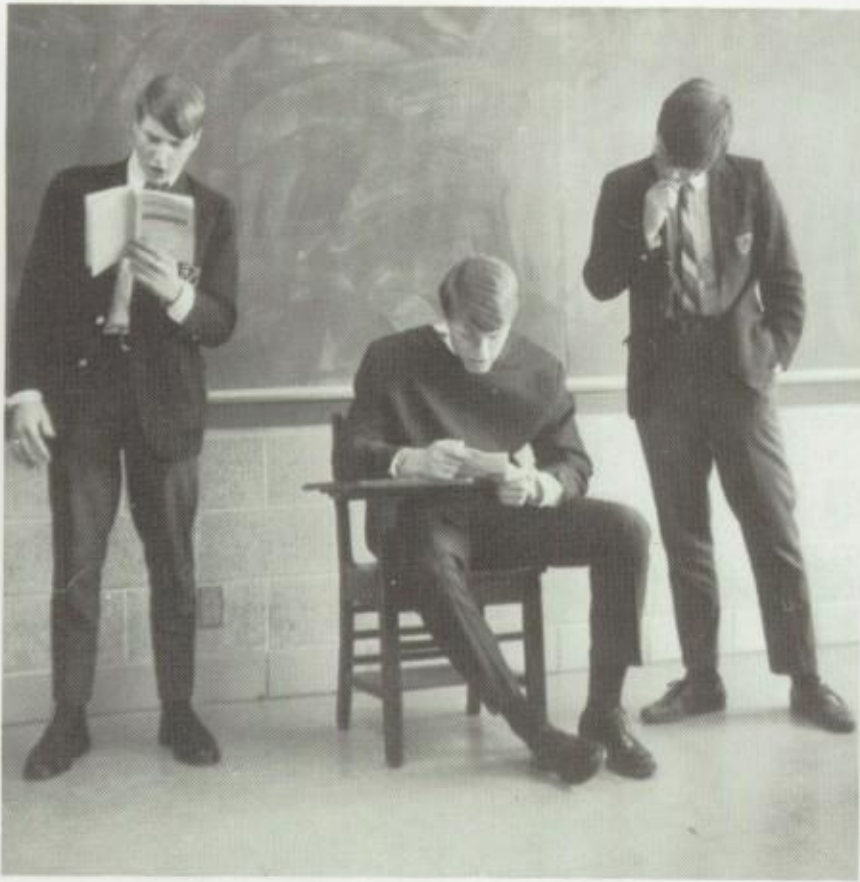

RECTOR AND HEADMASTER

The Rev. Canon F. Douglas Henderson, Rector and Headmaster of Breck School for the last fourteen years, was born in New Brunswick, Canada. After graduating from Bridgewater High School he attended University of King's College. He was ordained a priest of the Anglican Church in 1941 and became Rector of Georgetown Parish, Prince Edward Island.

After five years in this position Canon Henderson came to the United States to accept the post of Director of Christian Education at St. John's Church in St. Paul. He later was given a similar position for the entire Diocese. In 1948 Bishop Keeler made him Canon of St. Mark's Cathedral.

Six years after this honor was given Canon Henderson was appointed Headmaster of Breck School. At this time Breck was an almost totally different school from the one we know today. The campus was in St. Paul and a military program was in effect. Under the leadership of Canon Henderson many changes and improvements have been made. The military program has been abolished and the school moved to its present location. More recently Canon Henderson has been the driving force behind the building of the Chapel of the Holy Spirit and the addition of the new wing for the Lower School. His ambitious program for the future includes a math-science addition, a greatly expanded library and improvement of the present language lab facilities. Not neglecting the athletic department he has launched an active program to construct a covered hockey rink.

Well-known for his counseling work and outspoken ideas on education he has succeeded in attracting some of the best faculty members in the country. By these factors Canon Henderson has made Breck one of the foremost college preparatory schools in the country. The staff of the 1967 Mustang wishes to thank him for the work he has done in the past and wish him the best of luck in the future.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The Breck Board of Trustees is the governing body of the school. Under the Chairmanship of Bishop Kellogg the Board plans the financial program of the school, including operating budgets for the school, and establishes policies for the school.

The Board is sub-divided into three sub-committees. These groups are charged with setting long range goals, establishing a program which will meet the physical needs of these goals, and co-ordinating the financial efforts needed to bring this about.

While much of this work is not obvious to the student body, the efforts of the Board of Trustees will be evident in the years to come as the school's plans become physical realities.

Board members confer at a meeting.

MOTHERS' CLUB

The Breck Mothers' Club this year was, as usual, very active in the life of the school. They gave their normal large amounts of time to such various activities as the Mothers' Club Carnival, serving refreshments at the Homecoming dance, the Mid-Winter Dance, and the Prom, and their annual Style Show. With the money raised by such projects as the Carnival and Style Show the Club gave a great number of gifts to the school. These included a new projector and screen, a sound system for the Chapel, new equipment for the Fine Arts Department, material for both the Upper and Lower School Libraries, and donations to the Mustang, Bugle, and the Endowment Fund. These donations, plus the cost of the gifts, came to a total expenditure of $2,375.00.

The Mustang joins the students and faculty in expressing its gratitude for these and many other services rendered by the Breck Mothers' Club.

ASSISTANT HEADMASTER

This year a new face has appeared in the Assistant Headmaster's office and has become a common sight to faculty and students alike throughout the school.

Robert W. Herbert, who comes to the school with a wealth of experience in independent education, is a 1951 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Trinity College, where he earned his B.A. with Honors in History; and of Columbia University, where he received his M.A. in History in 1951. Mr. Herbert graduated from The Loomis School in Windsor, Connecticut, and served in World War II as a section leader in the American Field Service. After leaving Columbia he taught History at The Hill School in Pennsylvania from 1951 to 1961, during which time he studied at the American School for Classical Studies in Athens in the summer of 1957 and spent the following year on an exchange mastership at Clifton College in Bristol, England. In 1961 Mr. Herbert went to Phoenix Country Day School as Assistant Headmaster and served as Headmaster from 1962 to 1966.

We wish Mr. Herbert the best fortune in his new position and hope that he will be with the school for many years to come.

ASSISTANT TO THE HEADMASTER

Mrs. Dorothy Rader, a person with whom all concerned with the school are acquainted, has this year officially become the Assistant to the Headmaster.

Mrs. Rader came to Breck in 1955 as Canon Henderson's secretary and has continued in that post up to this year. In her new capacity she is working with the Headmaster in such areas as college admissions and counselling; representation at national conferences; liaison between the Headmaster's office and the Mother's Club and Women's Association; and in general relations with the school community. In her own words, the work involved "isn't really so different-there's just more of it."

Mrs. Rader has two sons, Luke and Steve, both of whom graduated from Breck; and her experience with the school not only has been far-reaching, but has earned her the respect of all. She assures us that she is immortal, so it looks as if she will continue to be with Breck for years to come. We hope so, and we wish her the best in her new position.

Mr. Kermit W. Strebel, B.A., M.A.

Administrative Assistant

Mr. Kermit W. Strebel, the school's able Administrative Assistant, came to Breck in 1965 with an impressive background. Born in 1920, he graduated from high school in Arlington, Minnesota with the class of '38. After receiving his B.A. from Carleton College. After briefly attending the Harvard Business School he enlisted in the Navy at the outbreak of World War Two. During the war Mr. Strebel served in a number of posts on both land and sea.

After the war Mr. Strebel elected to remain in the Navy. From 1946 to 1965 he served in various executive positions of progressively increasing authority and responsibility. During this time he worked in such diversified places as Atlantic City, Guantanamo Bay, Cleveland, Denver, Paris, The Pacific Fleet, Washington, D.C., and Yorktown, Virginia. His last job with the Navy was as Comptroller of the U.S. Naval Weapons Station, a major base with an annual budget of fifteen million dollars and employing in excess of seventeen hundred persons. While holding this responsibility Mr. Strebel attended night school at George Washington University and, in 1965, received his Masters Degree in Personnel Administration.

Since coming to Breck Mr. Strebel has been deeply involved in the "Commitment to Betterment." He has done a fine job and the Mustang Staff wishes him continued success.

The Administrative Assistant confers with his predecessor

Director Of Testing

Mr. John Nelson began teaching at Breck thirty-six years ago. His mathematical grasp and uncanny ability to tell if homework was not done soon earned him the nickname the "Fox".

While Mr. Nelson officially retired two years ago and taught his last regular class last year he continues at Breck in the capacity of Director of Testing. In this position he still has contact with the students, many of them sons of Mr. Nelson's former students.

We all hope that Mr. Nelson will stay on at Breck in his present capacity. For when he goes a little bit of Breck goes along with him. The 1967 Mustang Staff extends its best wishes to a great teacher and a great man, Mr. John Nelson, the "Fox."

A school's life may be centered in its students, but the core of the school itself is the faculty. The teaching staff of a school makes it what it is or is not. A teacher is not only entrusted with the instruction of a youngster, but also the molding of his character, his development into a human being. The teacher is a symbol of power and responsibility, but also of friendly warmth. He is a guide to those on their way to adulthood.

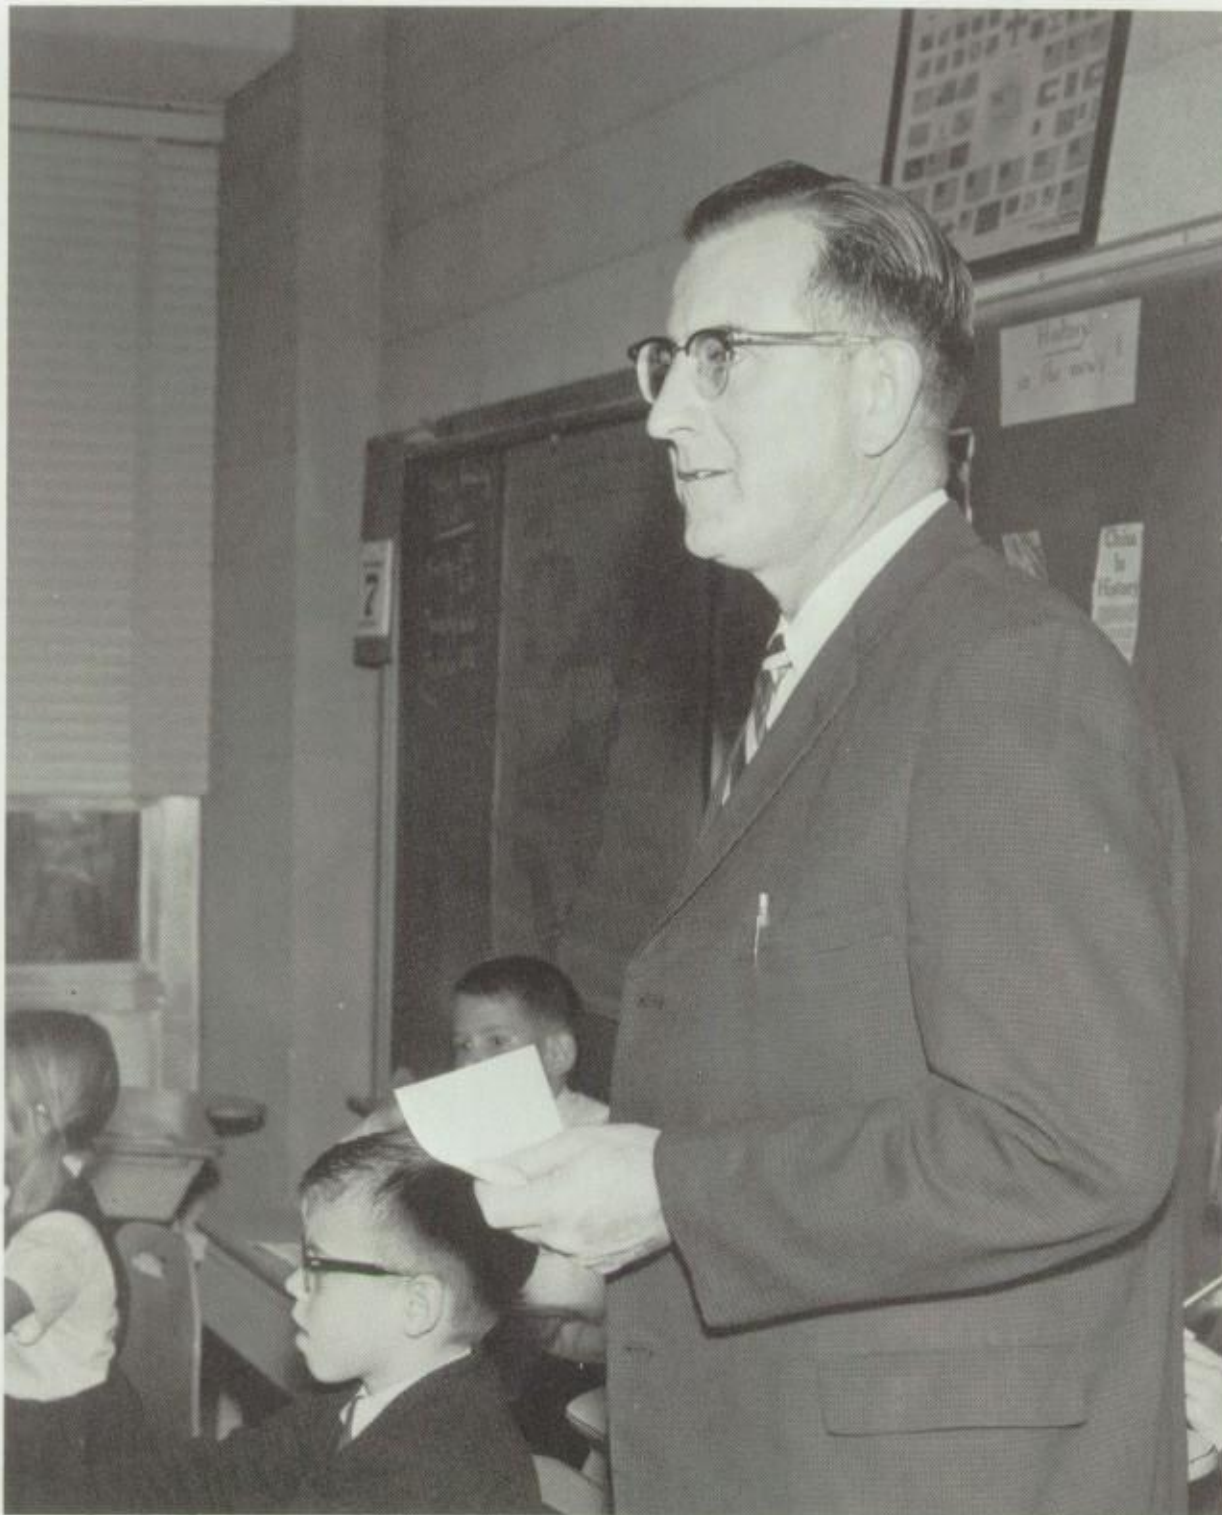

Breck's faculty is a varied group, one that could never be brought under a single stereotype. Each faculty member is individual, a separate part of this community and the one outside our school. If each faculty member at Breck does not fulfill the image of what a teacher should be, it is only a greater tribute to his character.

CO-EDUCATION

LOWER SCHOOL

Lower School Supervisor

Once again the Lower School, under the supervision of Mr. Earl Hovland, developed into a very well organized community of young men and women.

The Lower School is charged with the responsibility of preparing students in the grades through sixth to adjust to both the social and academic pressures of High School. A very strong curriculum accomplishes the second part of this task. The first part involves the newly created Junior Student Council, the newspaper, the "Little Bugler", and the new School Patrol system which directs students arriving in the morning.

Our hat is off to you, Mr. Hovland and your fine staff, for a year which lived up to Breck's high standards. The editors and entire staff wish you the best of luck for the future.

ENGLISH

Head Of English Dept.

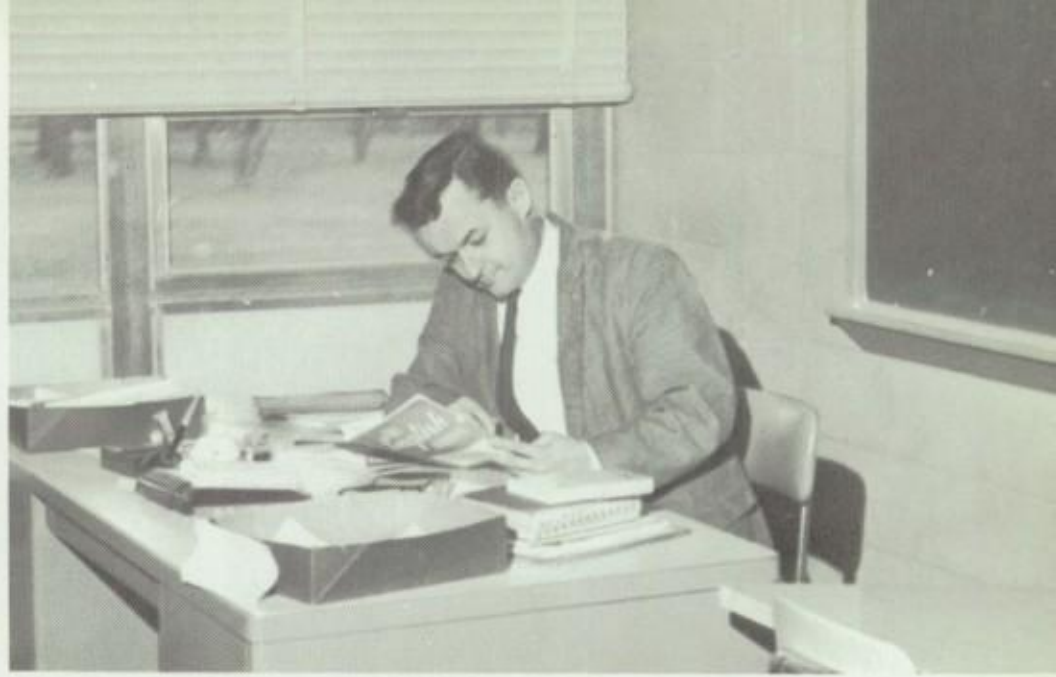

Although not substantially different from last year, the Breck School English Department managed, as always, to be on the alert for new materials and curricula while simultaneously maintaining the high standards that have equipped Breck students for some of the most difficult colleges in the country. Taken in general, the studies offered were not much different from last year. Striving to build a durable foundation for the long years of formal education that await the young students, the department continued to teach the fundamentals of language and literature to the Seventh and Eighth Graders. Grammar and composition were stressed while a general understanding of the various forms of literature was dealt with in preparation for the following. Ninth Grade provided, as indicated, a unique opportunity to closely examine the diverse types of literature found throughout the ages, e.g. the short story, the novel, the essay, and poetry. At higher levels, Sophomores and Juniors again study American and English literature, respectively, while the Seniors pursued representative classics from all cultures and periods.

Extracurricular activities and several new methods were useful this year. Many of the classes saw plays at the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre; the Seniors, for instance, attended a presentation of Thomas Dekker's "Shoemaker's Holiday". In addition, many students in the Eighth and Ninth Grades used new programmed learning materials for their grammar studies.

This is not to say, however, that the English Department has nothing in mind that could be used in the next few years. Special classes are being tentatively planned, one for the new or lagging students and one for those who wish to do Advanced Placement work in preparation for college. Other proposals include the addition of more of Shakespeare's writings into the curriculum and possibly even more work in composition. Perhaps the most exciting development, however, is an inter-departmental humanities course that is now under consideration.

In spite of the flurries of planning, however, the department has not lost sight of its immediate goal - the preparation of students for college - and consequently it is not to be expected that the administration will suddenly abandon a very successful curriculum for new methods or courses without long, arduous examination.

FINE ARTS

Head Of Fine Arts

MRS. ELIZABETH TOZER

Fine Arts credits are now required for graduation from Breck; and in response to student needs and demands, the activities of the department have been extensive and varied.

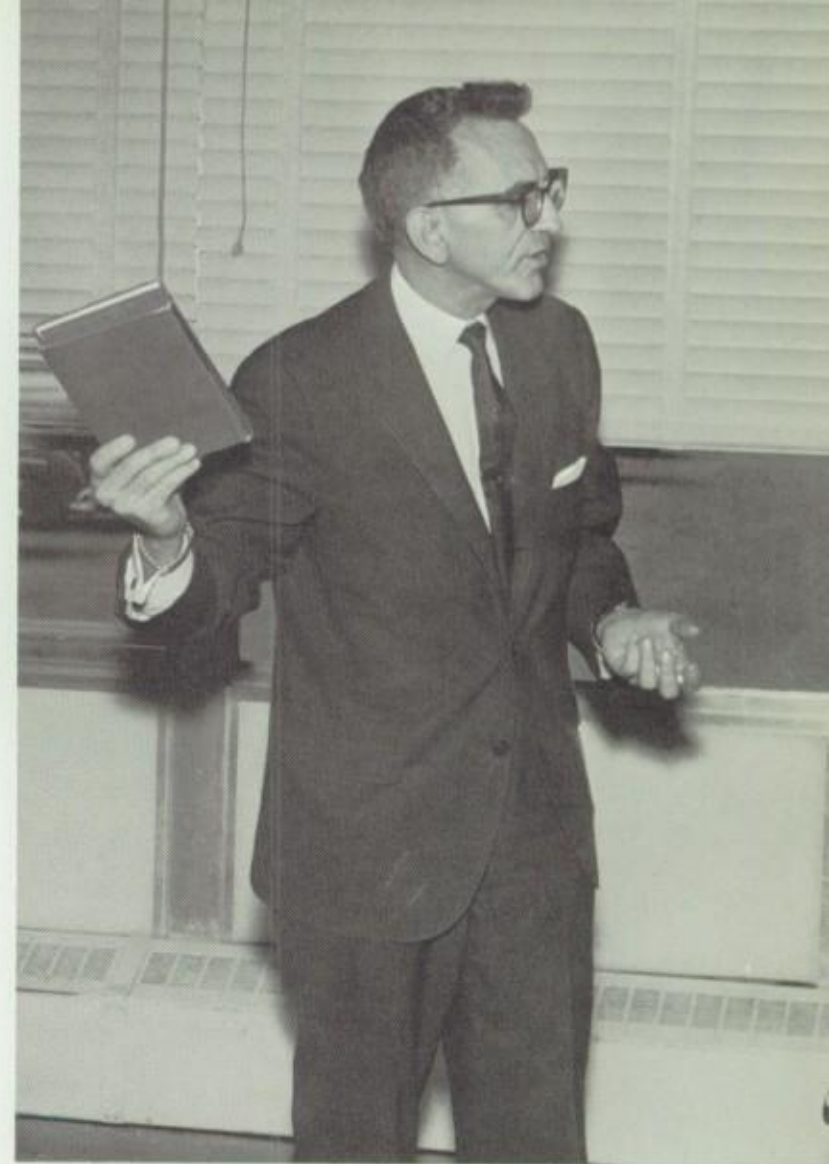

The Dramatics group presented two plays after spring vacation: the first a farce, "Arsenic and Old Lace", the second a drama, "Submerged". The Glee Club participated in a number of programs and concerts, including a Folk Mass, new and original to the student body; the Christmas Program; and the M.I.S.L. Concert. Art classes were involved in various projects, some of which were displayed throughout the school; these ranged from self-portraits to musical impressions, from clay sculpture to wood blocks.

In Music Appreciation this year students learned to recognize and to understand better the works and sounds of contemporary artists. Band was introduced through the seventh and eighth grade Instrumental Group under Mr. Maud. Debaters displayed their skills both to other schools and to the student body. All Upper School Fine Arts students went to see dress rehearsals of "Funny Girl" and "West Side Story".

All in all, the hard work by everyone concerned produced an exciting cultural year.

HISTORY

Head Of History Dept.

The History Department this year, under the leadership of Mr. Beech, was one of the most active in the school. The Breck student now has the chance to take history from their first year in the Upper School through their last. This provides a thorough background in all phases of this discipline.

The first history course is offered as a three year program. This is a world history class which is designed to provide a background for the more specific courses to come.

The next course offered is Mr. Dolen's Modern European History. This class covers the period from the rise of Napoleon through the Second World War, and gives a good introduction to the next class, American History. This class, taught by Mr. Beech, presents history as a series of topics. The class studied such topics as power, the President, foreign policy, economics, and others. This class climaxes the actual history courses but two other classes are offered within the department.

The first of these was Economics. This was presented in two parts. The first was a study of the basics of economic science, concentrating on such things as business cycles, depressions and inflations. The second part was a study of the practical application of economics to political science and sociology.

The other course was Social Seminar, taught, and created by, Mr. Beech. The class, in a definite break with tradition, met only once a week and was conducted as an informal seminar. The subject was social deprivation and many prominent Twin City social workers, businessmen, and leaders spoke to the group. For field work the members of the class were volunteers in Project Motivation, a type of Big Brother organization run by the University Y.M.C.A. Throughout the course the emphasis was on the human element in social work and on practical solutions to problems. This class is representative of the activity and imagination which made the History Department one of the most dynamic in the school.

LANGUAGE

Head Of Language Dept.

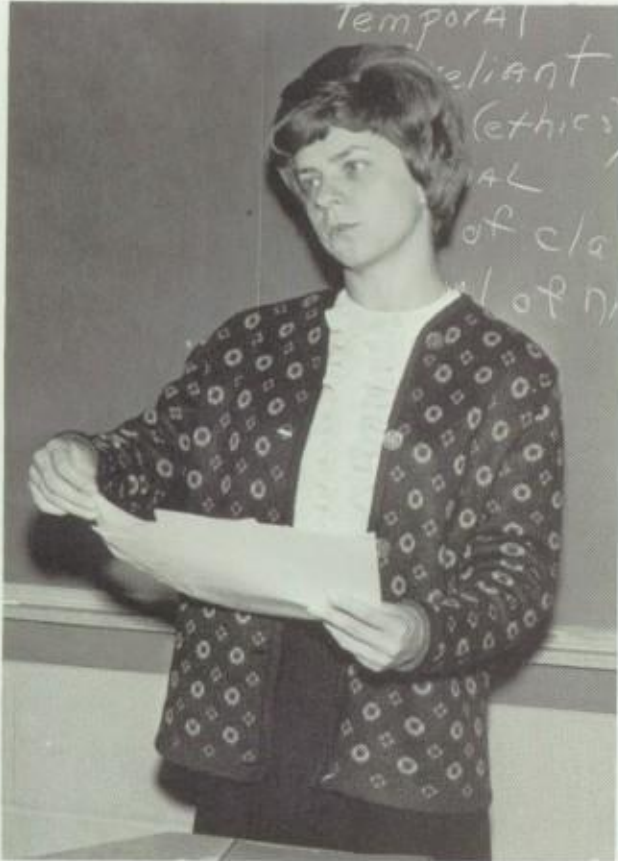

In the old Breck School years ago, the Language Department began with only two courses. Since that time the offerings have expanded to include French, Spanish, German, and Latin. In the last year the department has dropped Latin in favor of consolidation toward a modern foreign language curriculum.

This curriculum extends back into the sixth grade, where a student can begin an introductory course in French with Miss Raske, continuing, if he wishes, up through his senior year with Mrs. Blackburn. Or he may elect to begin any of the three languages in the Upper School and continue as long as he wishes after his three required years.

The Language Department, like the rest of the school, is constantly at work striving to create new and better course offerings, some of which may well be quite different from anything the student has encountered before. The German Program, for example, is now in its second year of operation and has changed in some respects from the year before. The student now makes out a contract with Mr. Neher for the work of the term and is expected to fulfill the contract. As of last term, if the student falls behind in his work, he is permitted to attend the infamous Saturday Session where he can get additional special help. The student is still allowed to go at his own individual rate of speed through the text and supplementary material, the fast student going as quickly as he can and the slow student taking as much time as he needs.

The beginning course in Spanish as well has been largely individualized this year, and Mr. Uram is currently devising an expansion of this program which will go into effect next year. In both French and Spanish effort is made to group students by ability; and grouping will presently depend far more on ability than on grade level.

MATHEMATICS

Head Of Math Dept.

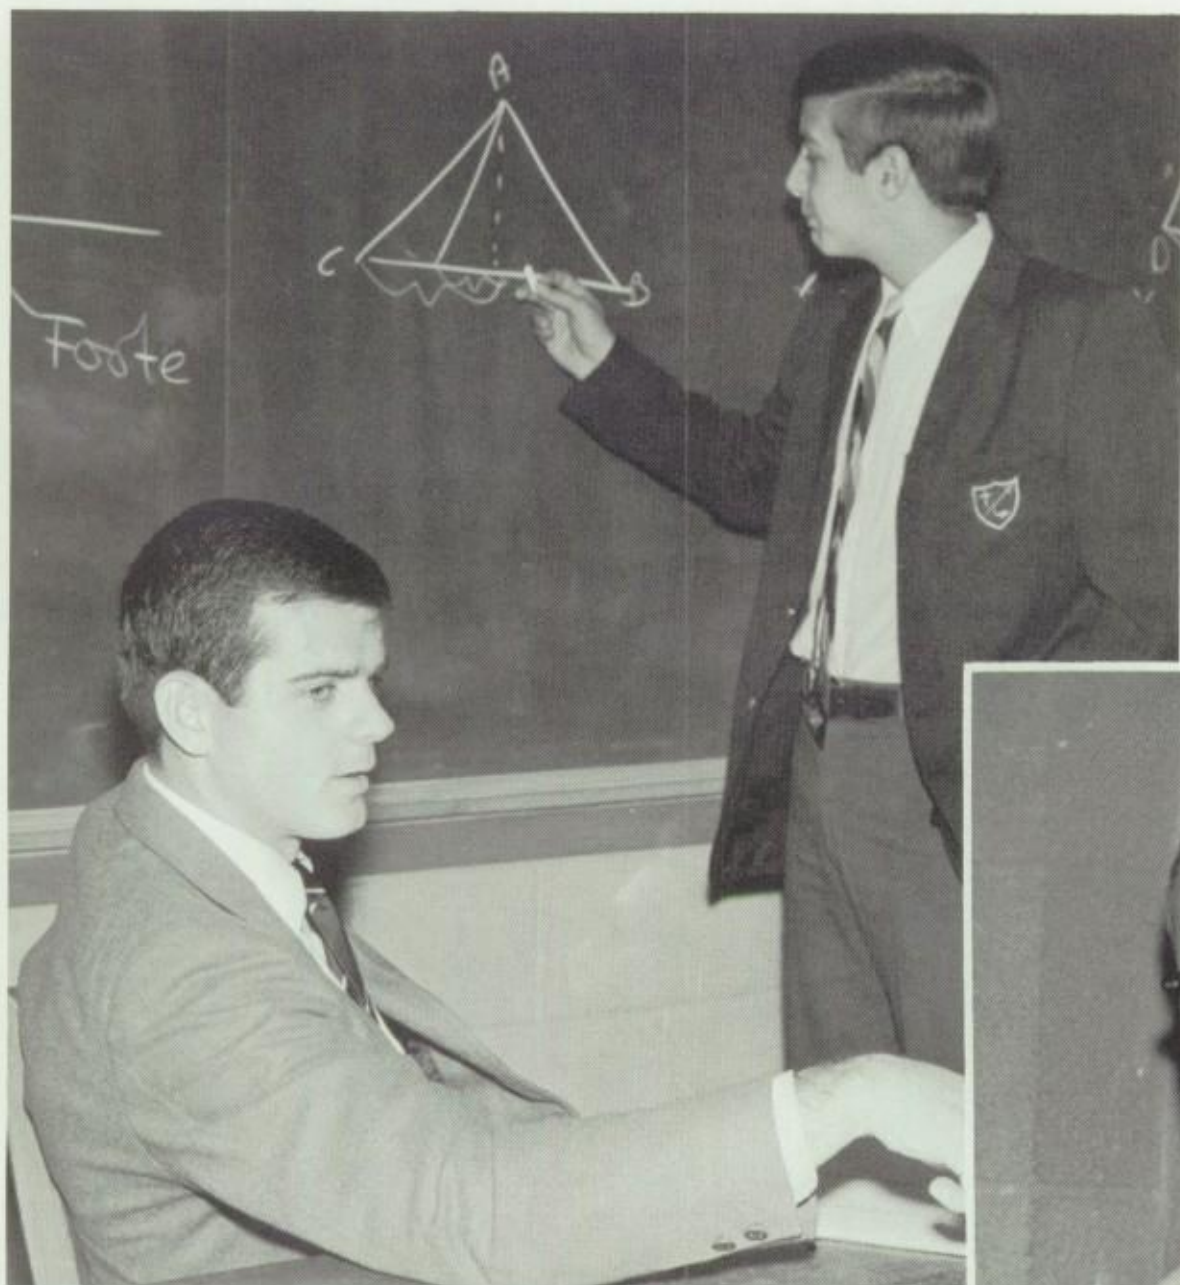

Thriving under the exciting liberal philosophy of the "new" Breck, the mathematics department has, again, become one of the strongest in the school. As in years past, the Minnemast curriculum from the University of Minnesota is enabling Lower School students (Kindergarten through Third Grade) to experience a unique series of courses that unite math and science into an understandable network of fundamental concepts. Learning through their own discoveries, the students go through a more meaningful approach to learning than the outdated "Three R's" technique. In the future, the department hopes to carry Minnemast into all the first eight grades, thereby benefiting the whole mathematics curriculum since, as Mr. Yonker put it, "the students will be dealing with more sophisticated materials at a lower level."

Throughout Grades Four through Eleven, the recently developed Yale and Illinois University curricula are generally used (SMMSG and UICSM, respectively), thus providing other forward-looking courses in the "new math" to the bulk of Breck's students. In the senior year, an Advanced Placement Calculus course is still offered, in addition to the regular continuation of the SMMSG materials.

Computer studies still supplement the daily program at Breck. Regular courses in programming are given in the Eighth, Eleventh and Twelfth grades and next year it is hoped that these skills will be taught at even lower levels. In addition, Breck is now renting time on the big computer at the University of Minnesota, a Control Data 1604. In conjunction with this new opportunity, Fortran Programming, one of the most popular means of operating almost all large computers, is being taught to Juniors and Seniors with the expectation that this will give them a headstart in college-level computer work.

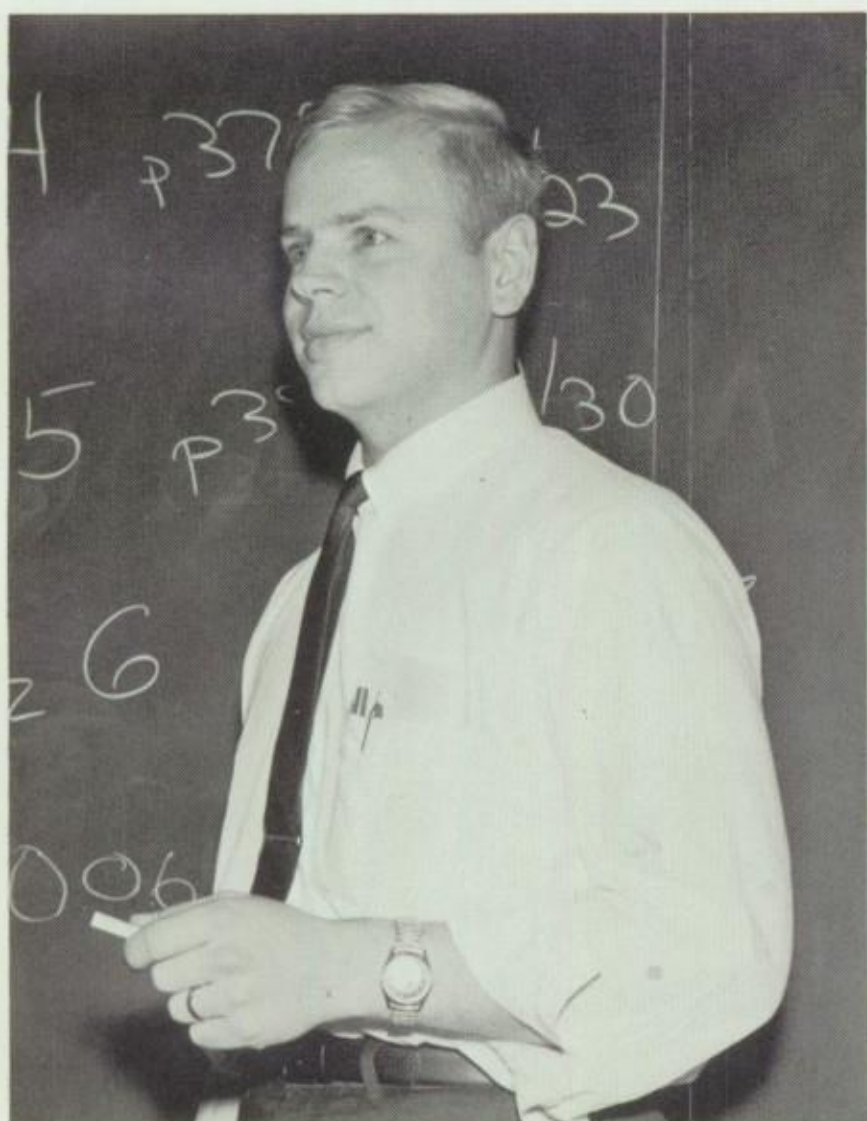

But as usual, the most exciting events in the new math are concerned with change. A new non-graded mathematics program is being developed to make every class more effective for the individual student. Consequently, looking over the whole department, Breck School can look forward to many prosperous years of progressive mathematics in the future while looking back to a year well-spent in 1966-1967.

The Breck Chapel

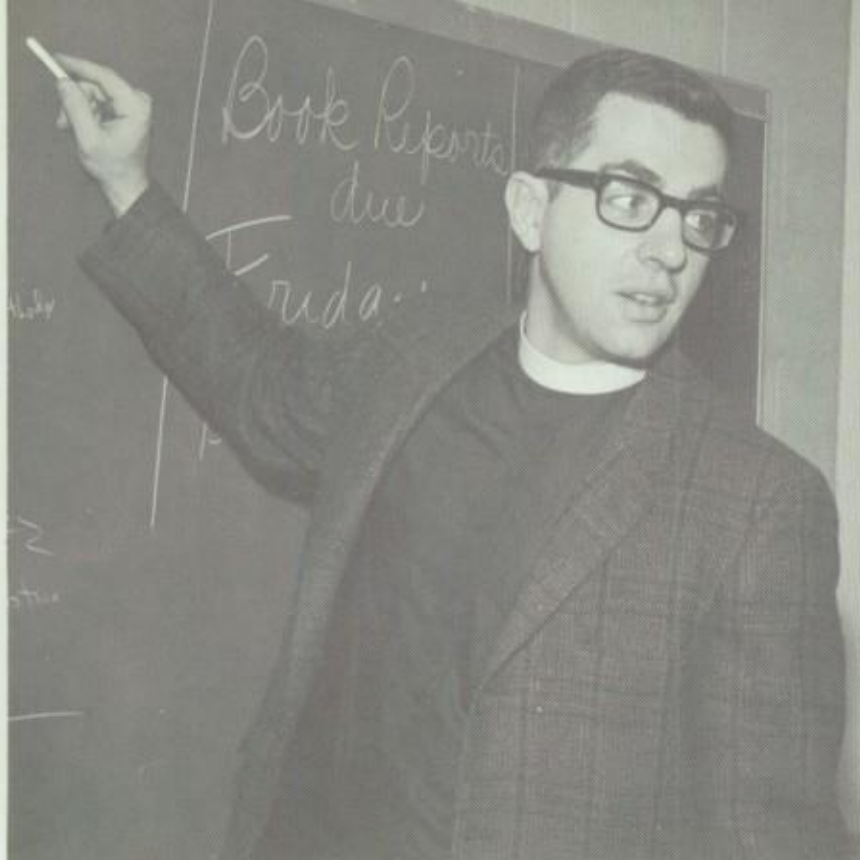

The Spiritual life of Breck School is a constant inspiration to the student. It is concerned with helping each student find worthwhile moral and ethical values and standards upon which he can make responsible decisions and commitments today and in his adult life. Each student is encouraged to grow in spirit as well as in mind and body.

Chapel services are attended four times per week, and students are encouraged to attend Communion each Wednesday morning. These services give the student a chance for spiritual refreshment with the opportunity to gain new perspective and strength.

The Chapel format includes sermons by the Headmaster, the Chaplain, and guest speakers invited throughout the year to address the student body.

Classes in Sacred Studies offer the students at Breck an opportunity to study and understand their Judeo-Christian heritage. Students study the Bible, books on the history of our faith, and discuss problems and questions of various nature, thus expanding the horizons of their faith.

Breck strives to live up to its motto, "Honor, God and Country."

SCIENCE

Head Of Science Dept.

The primary function of Breck School is to prepare its students to do college work, and considering the many medical and scientific break-throughs, it is necessary for students planning to attend college to have at least a basic background in the principles of science. At Breck the course of study accomplishes much more than the minimum requirements to satisfy any college.

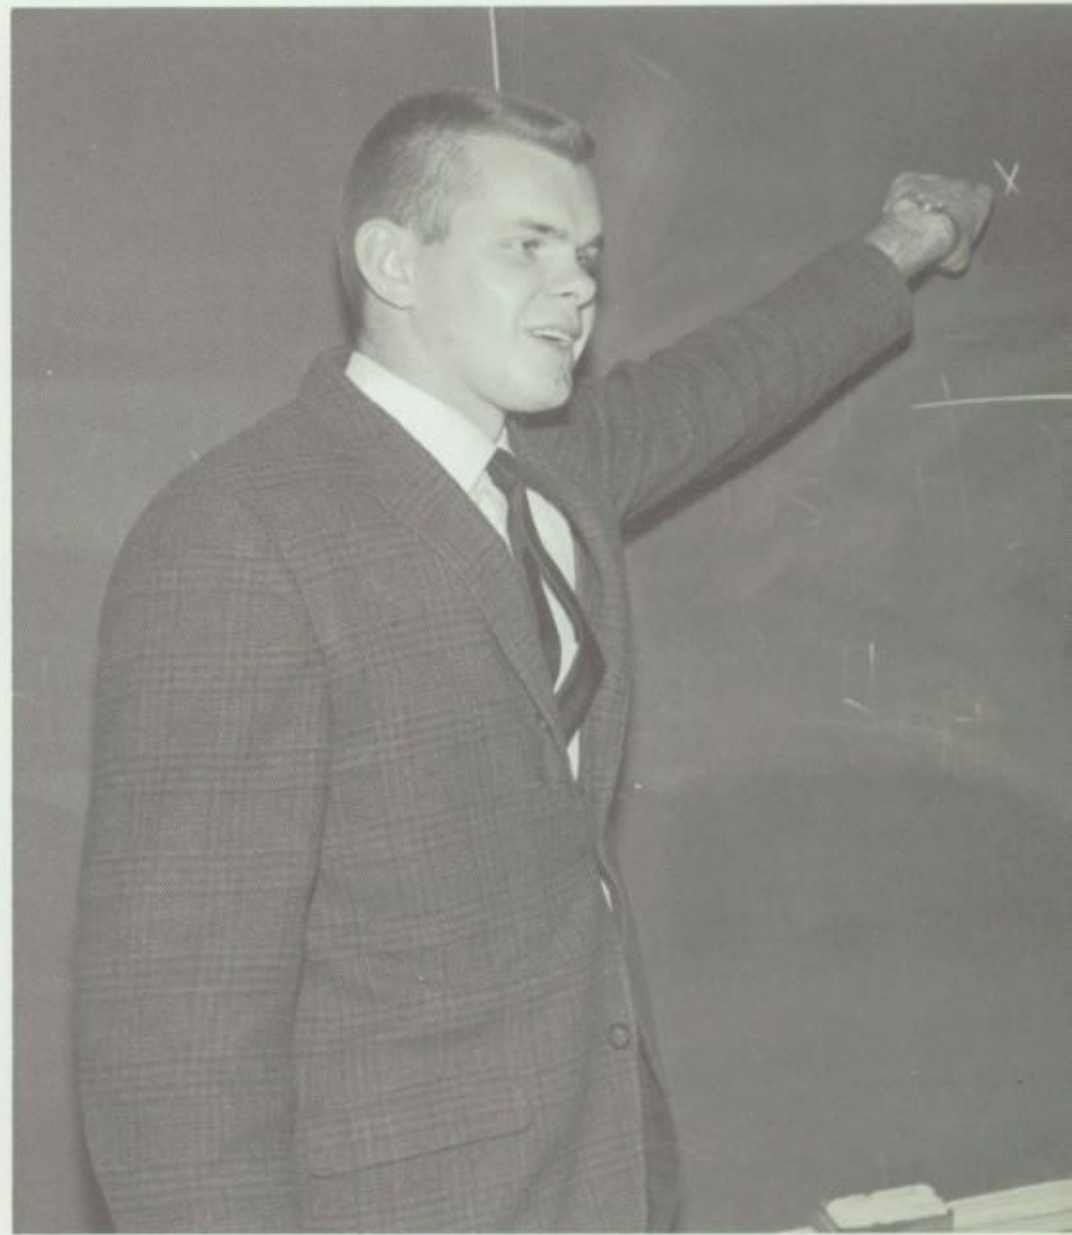

During the past five years, five new programs have been added to the science curriculum. These are the PSSC materials (Physical Science Study Committee) in the twelfth grade, the CHEM Study program (Chemical Education Materials Study) in the eleventh grade, the BSCS course (Biological Sciences Curriculum Study) in the tenth grade, the SMSG material (School Mathematics Study Group) in the seventh and ninth grades, used to study measurement and graphing, and the SSSP materials (Secondary School Science Project) which is the newest material and is being tried this year in the eighth grade.

The curriculum of the SSSP course, sub-titled "Time, Space, and Matter", consists of a sequence of nine interrelated investigations in which students investigate the nature of the physical universe. The activities, readings, and laboratory equipment are designed to place the student in the role of investigator. As a result of his active role he gains techniques of investigation and a broader understanding of the fundamental ideas of science.

The Upper School, along with everything else at Breck School, underwent many changes this year, the most noticeable of which was the addition of nine Seventh Grade girls. We have found, in spite of the higher chatter level of study halls, that this is a welcome change; and we can safely predict that as the years go by and these hallowed halls become accustomed to the new femininity, these girls and their successors will indeed make an enjoyable, beauteous bevy.

Guess who left a napkin on the floor?

Students in the Lower School this year studied a great variety of subjects, many of which, of course, were designed primarily to prepare them for their advanced work in the higher grades. Learning, however, in the Lower School is gauged to excite the pupil to a greater desire for knowledge. The annual Science Fair is an activity that helps to realize this end. The Fair was, as usual, a success due to the participation of the students. The many projects exhibited at the Fair are examples of the applied learning sought in the Lower School.

The Mustang Staff worked hard . . .

. . . the glee club put on a folk mass . . .

. . . the drama group put on "Arsenic and Old Lace" . . .

. . . and the Bugle's on the spot reporting told us about it all every month.

Dear Reader:

This is the page set aside for the yearbook staff. It is also the last page I am doing before the book is sent to the publisher. In considering what I should put on this page I thought of several ideas. But I decided to break with tradition and try to tell you something about the book you are now reading. Our staff list is in the front of the book and all of us have pictures for those that are interested. For this reason I decided to dispense with pictures for a moment and follow this format instead.

Putting out a yearbook is a long process. It begins in the spring when the next year's editor is chosen. Over the summer he thinks about the way he wants the book to look and whom he wants on his staff. At the same time the business manager makes plans for his staff and his money-raising campaign. In the fall the staff is chosen and work begins. From this time until the book is published there is a rush of activity to get pictures taken, to get material written, and get them together in order to make the deadlines.

There are several factors which affect the way in which this operates. The first is the editor. Since in any operation the leader always ends up with the lion's share of the work, it makes sense to choose leaders who are familiar with the operation. This is also true with yearbooks. If the editor does not know what he is doing, he will have a difficult time doing it. It is my understanding that in the past few years the editors came into the job with little or no previous experience. This puts a tremendous load on the editor. The solution to this is simple. But it will require work both on the part of the editors and the student body. The editors must involve others in the book. But others must want to get involved. Too often people want to be on the staff only to look at pictures and not to work. This is not the way to produce good yearbooks. Only a real effort by all involved will remedy the situation and allow Breck to have truly first rate Mustangs.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student council is the governing body of the student body. The Student Council is charged with creating interest and activity among the students as well as representing the students to the Administration.

In order to do an efficient job of this the Council began by drawing up a constitution. With the help of Mr. Stockwell, their advisor, the constitution was written and adopted by the students.

This document created a council consisting of the President and Vice President of each class, with the senior class being allowed one extra representative.

This paper in itself was a big step. But much more came out of the 1967 Student Council. Much creative thinking was done about the relationship between the council and the school, as well as such new projects as S.O.M.A., a group, the idea of one council member, to stimulate student involvement in outside activities. We of the yearbook staff feel that this type of thinking will be continued and will be a powerful influence on the school in the future.

ART

Mrs. Pinkham's art classes this year stressed creativity. The instructor, a well known Twin City artist, emphasized use of imagination in planning and carrying out projects and understanding the concepts of the media being used. She also had her students work in areas not commonly covered in art courses, such as wood reliefs, as well as the more traditional painting and clay work. Many students commented that this work helped them in their more usual art forms. Some fundamental concepts of spatial ideas were covered, notably "negative space". To help her students with all of this Mrs. Pinkham was available during many hours of the day for extra help.

It looks as if this years art program has been a success. The Mustang extends its best wishes to Mrs. Pinkham for next year's program.

DEBATE

The debate team this year, while not participating in an inter-school debate program, did do some very interesting projects. Several debates were actually presented to the Upper School on such controversial topics as "Should capital punishment be abolished?" and "Should Red China enter the United Nations?" These programs proved to be interesting and informative and a real change of pace for Chapel Services.

GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club at Breck this year was under the direction of Mr. Maud. This group was very active in the religious life of the school. Singing at chapels and occasionally presenting their own programs the Glee Club brought some of the best in music to Breck functions. Among the many fine numbers they did the presentation of the American Folk Mass stood out. Singing to the tune of guitars played by Rick White and Messrs. Beech and Clements, the Glee Club did an outstanding job.

The highlight of the year was an evening of choral music presented jointly by the Breck Glee Club and the Northrop Choir, accompanied by the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra conducted by Mr. Leopold Sipe. This program was presented to a group of parents and friends who nearly filled the Breck Chapel. It is hoped that next year will be equally as successful for the Glee Club.

The Glee Club presented a joint concert with the Northrop School Senior Choir.

The Breck Bugle

Vol. XXIV, No. 8

BRECK SCHOOL, MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

Friday, April 28, 1967

Under the influence of editors Rick White and Jim Pearson the Breck Bugle this year became much more than merely a paper which wrote about school events. It became truly a school paper, reporting on controversial subjects of concern to Breck students. The paper covered such wide ranging subjects as the school's need for better drama facilities, the problems of drugs among teenagers, theater reviews, and a great deal of works by students in the form of letters, poems and stories. Not a few student essays were printed in this year's Bugle.

The two editors gave the paper quite a bit of their time and talent this year and Pearson's "peerless, pristine and aposteriori prose" will truly be missed.

DRAMATICS

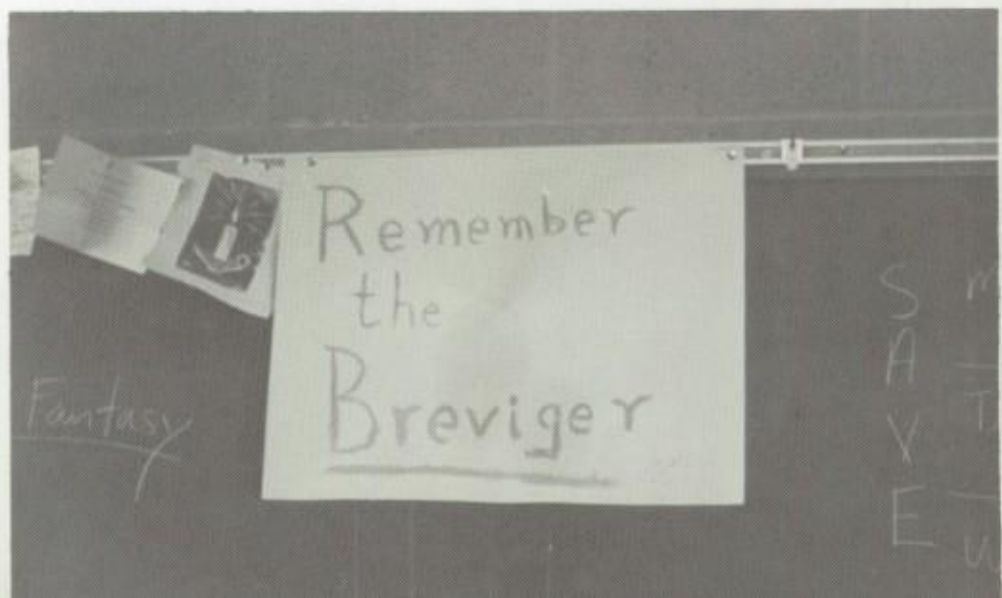

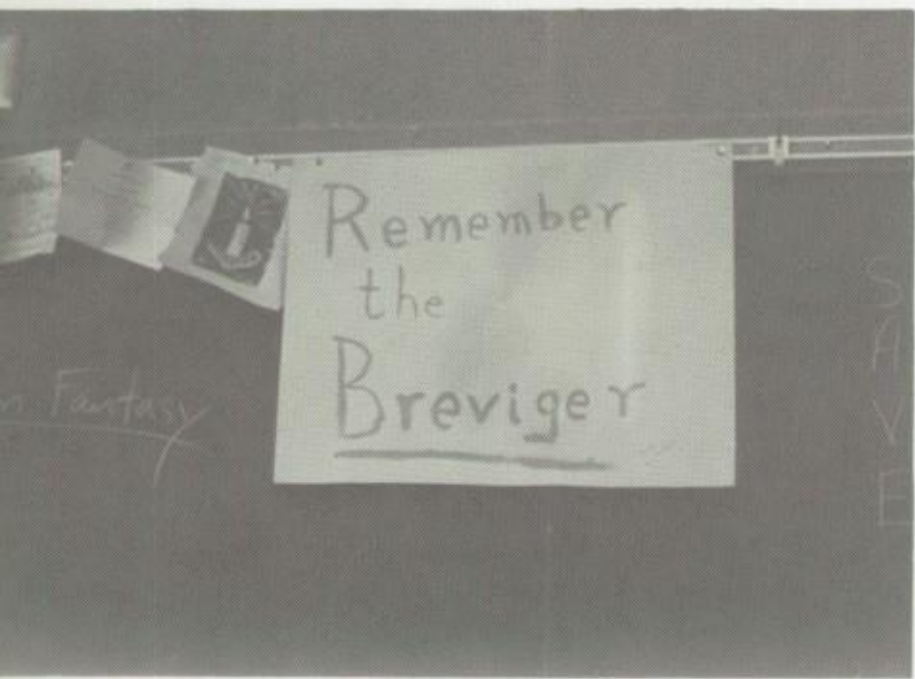

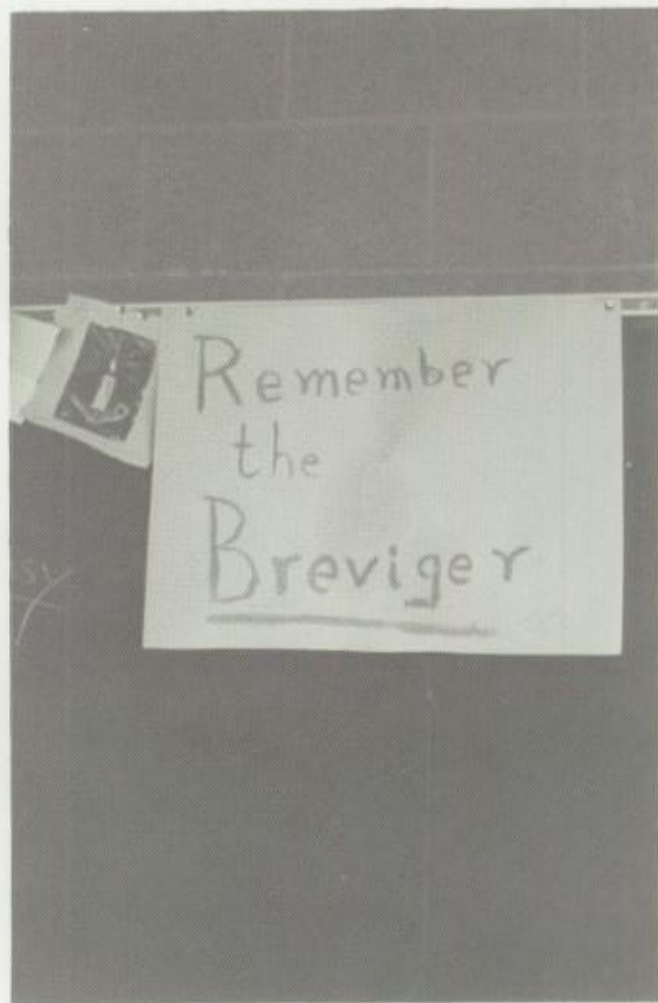

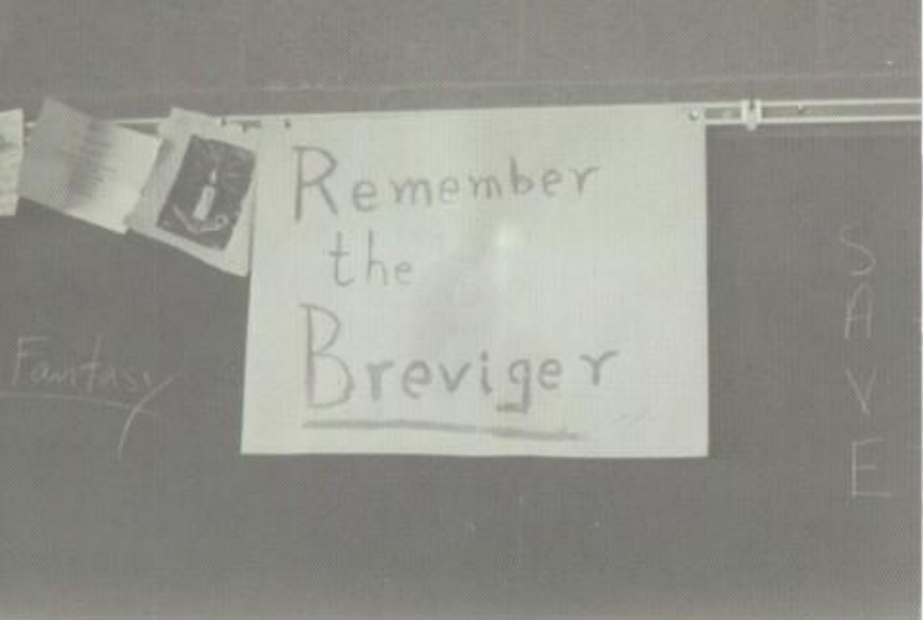

This year's Dramatics group produced the play "Arsenic and Old Lace". The play, given for an audience of about two hundred and fifty, was a real success. The production was made especially interesting due to the fact that much of it was done by student director, Rick White. Rick designed the set and did much of the work on lighting and staging as well as taking a leading role. Other student participation came from Jim Robinson, Ross Hammond, and Dan Hoffmann who did the lighting and sound work as well as all those who took parts. Mr. Krenz deserves much credit for a fine year in drama.

HOMECOMING 1966

Breck's Homecoming celebration began at Canon Henderson's home on Sunday, October 10. The Seniors and the football team gathered to choose their Queen. The five finalists chosen were: Maureen Callan, escorted by Clint Miller; Cassie Clark, escorted by Dave Anderly; Nancy Haire, escorted by Dave Strebel; Sue Shilkrou, escorted by Tony Goddard; and Debbie Wingert, escorted by Bill Adair.

On Homecoming Day, the following Friday, all five girls and their escorts dined with the Headmaster and Mr. Herbert. After the meal was finished, the candidates changed into their formals for the coronation in the school chapel. As is the custom, Mr. Aarthun chose the new Queen, Debbie Wingert.

Directly after the coronation, the football team descended to the locker room in order to suit up, while the rest of the students and the Homecoming court attended a pep fest in the auditorium. It was a dreary day, with rain and hail throughout most of the afternoon. The fans, however, remained in spite of the rain and cold. The Mustangs came through for their school. Breck beat Concordia's Meteors 19-12 in a grueling, hard-fought game.

That evening, the students at the dance were in high spirits from the afternoon's victory. The dance itself was Most enjoyable, with Marsha and the Lynchmen providing the music. Homecoming 1966 was one of the highlights of both the athletic and the social year at Breck.

MID-WINTER DANCE

This year's Mid-Winter Dance was Breck's second informal mid-winter dance. This informal dance has evolved from the mid-winter formal of years past. The music has evolved from the slow dance to the sound of this year's band, the Still-roven, a well-known local rock band. The turnout at the dance was very good this year. The students, generally, seem to favor the change-over from formal dress to casual. The Mother's Club provided refreshments for the dancers. It was a highly enjoyable evening, largely due to police protection (see facing page).

The Aarthun's unidentified companion seems puzzled by modern music and dancing.

Athletics is a major part of life at Breck. Every student is required to participate in one or another area of athletic life at Breck. This not only develops the physical well-being of the students but also helps to instill in them the ideals of sportsmanship and intense personal effort which they may carry with them as they leave Breck.

VARSIITY FOOTBALL

In August forty-two football hopefuls reported to Breck, suitcase in hand, for a nine-day conditioning camp at Cass Lake; they returned to Breck a team. Under the leadership of coaches Aarthun, Blatherwick, and Beech, this was no ordinary Breck team. What it lacked in depth, it more than made up with a spirit that permitted no discouragement.

For the usual team it would have been a discouraging season. Breck was beaten the first game of the season by Rosemount; and before the last game the team had lost through injury six of its mainline starters. Yet it was a good season against a strong league. The highpoint came when, on a cold and rainy Homecoming afternoon, Breck ground out the most savored of its wins against Concordia.

There is a sidelight to the spirit shown throughout the season by the Mustangs, a lesson that should be noted for the future. Seldom before in recent years has student attendance at football games been so loyal. Even on Homecoming, the most uncomfortable of all football days, the stands were packed; and the spirit shown that day has continued through the year in all phases of school life.

The future looks good for next year with a strong nucleus of both offense and defense returning. If the spirit is as good as it was this year, we can look forward to a very fine season indeed.

Camp conferences

Football Camp

In keeping with progress, the Breck School Athletic Department tried something new this year. For a week and a half the entire football squad went North to the Cass Lake Episcopal Camp to practice football. It was a long, hard stay with practices twice a day, but it was also very worthwhile since it allowed the team to practice together without all the temptations found in the Twin Cities during the normal August workouts.

Each day started with a big breakfast and then it was off to the "football field", which was about as much like a football field as the surrounding forests and just about as safe to play on, as the numerous sprained ankles proved. After practice there was some free time, lunch, another practice and then more free time to go swimming, water skiing or just recuperating. The day was topped off by a scrumptious dinner and movies, either Laurel and Hardy or football films. The nights were something else again. Although most found it expedient to get some rest after sundown, there was always someone or something keeping people awake. This was most noticeable on the last night when everybody saw fit to stay awake and celebrate.

One of the most important things to come out of the camp did not seem to be the skills acquired or the fun everyone had, but instead the spirit of the team as a unit, working together. The whole school seemed to notice this spirit and responded with good attendance at games both home and away despite the long losing streak.

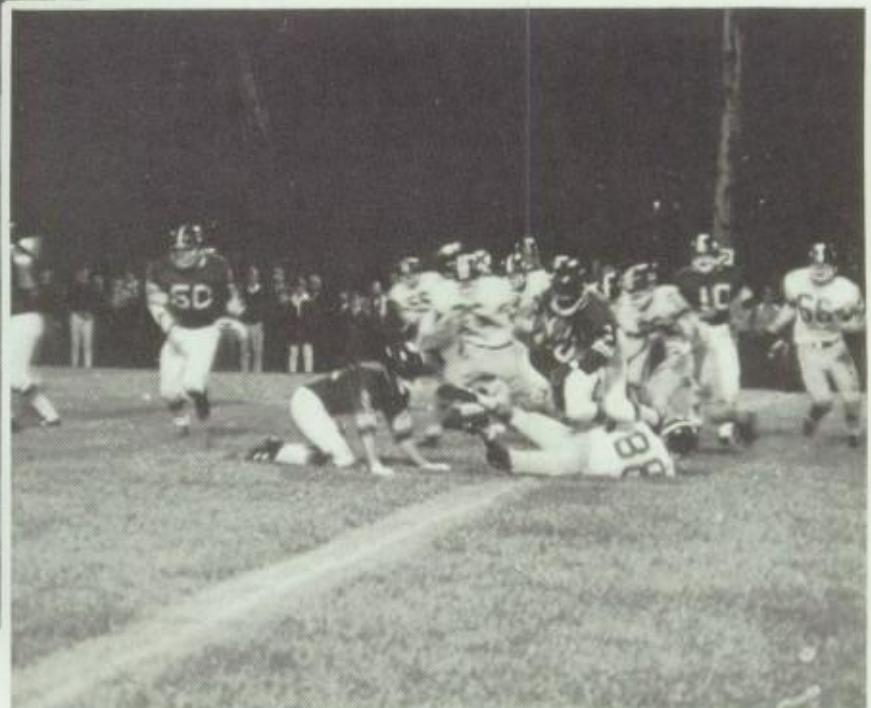

The line holds for a punt.

We lost a close one to Rosemount under the lights.

The defense stiffens.

The team scrimmages Bemidji - and does well.

David Anderly, All Conference and Most Valuable Player, pulls in a pass.

Future

Next year's "A" Squad football team, lead by co-captains Tim Nordland and Kevin Gibson, will be without many of this year's good players but the empty spots will be quickly and aptly filled by the "B" Squaders who often helped out in the Varsity games. This, along with the continued football camps and the fine coaching of Mr. Aarthun, Mr. Blatherwick and Mr. Beech, gives Breck School one of the brightest futures on the football field it has had in many years.

"B" SQUAD FOOTBALL

In the past years the Varsity and the Junior Varsity football teams have been two separate units working separately, learning separately and only seldom playing together. This year it was different. The "A" and "B" Squads, as they are now called, were truly two parts of the same team. The reason for this change was the football camp. Both squads participated in this innovation and, in fact, all through the camp time the players were not separated into different squads. It was only after the return to the cities that it was decided who would play on which squad. Thus the two squads learned the same basic football and had the experience of playing and working together and being bonded together into one team. Thus many of this year's "B"

Squaders, such as Todd Anderson, Dan Freed, Dennis Kanten, Paul Cederberg, Clancy Dokmo, Bob Stewart, and captain Doug Whitney, were able to play in the "A" Squad games and be of great help. In fact, three of the "B" Squaders received both "B" and "A" Squad letters. They were Doug Whitney, Dan Freed and Paul Cederberg.

The future for a "B" Squad team is always hazy at its best. Most of this year's team will go and play for the "A" Squad next year leaving next year's team completely open, but if Breck School can keep producing the drive, spirit and talent that this year's team showed, it will never have anything but strong football teams on both levels.

Being one of the newest sports to come to Breck School, soccer has built up an impressive retinue and people who go out for Varsity Soccer for the fun of it soon find that it's more work than fun. Although this wasn't one of the team's better years at Breck, it was a good season and it produced one All Conference player, John Cole at the center-half position. But the team had more to it than one All Conference player; it was a team that worked together and that showed amazing spirit. Even though it was greatly aided by the presence of Seniors John Cole, captain, Joe Carter at the left-half position, Bill Stierwald at center-forward, Ed Arenz at the right-half position and Tom Melander in the goals, the team had several underclassmen such as Steve Garske and next year's captain, Jim Beyl, who were also outstanding and who, with the help of Coach Neher, will help the team next year.

John Cole, 1966 captain of the Breck School Soccer Team, was picked by the coaches of the Minnesota Soccer League for the All Conference Soccer Team. John, leading the team through victories and defeats, was chosen because of his outstanding play at his position of center-half.

"C" SQUAD FOOTBALL

Keeping in step with the changes made in the "A" and "B" Squads, this year the Athletic Department changed the format for what was formerly the ninth grade football team and made it the "C" Squad. This was not merely a change in name, however. Instead of being a completely different team it was more of an extension of the bigger teams in that the boys learned the same basics and the same plays. This, according to the plan, will help prepare the boys to move into the "A" and "B" Squads next year without having to learn a completely new set of plays and a completely new method of playing.

Although the "C" Squad did not have such a good season this year, they did have several outstanding players, such as Steve Peeps who was given the Most Valuable Player award, who will help the "B" Squad very much next year.

Steve Peeps accepts the Most Valuable Player award.

7 AND 8 GRADE SPORTS

Although the Seventh and Eighth Grade sports program is not as yet, as comprehensive a program as it should be, steps were taken in the right direction this year. This was true mainly on the football field where, under the direction of Mr. Aarthur and the help of Senior football player Jim Robinson, the Seventh and Eighth graders learned the basics of the game. They learned them well enough to beat the "C" Squad in a short scrimmage and to wallop Glen Lake 41 to 0 under the leadership and outstanding play of quarterback Robbie Fischer.

The rest of the Seventh and Eighth Graders, boys and girls, played soccer most of the time and although not too much was accomplished everyone seemed to have fun.

For the last seven years, girls from Edina-Morningside High School have given up their Wednesday and Friday afternoons to cheer for the Breck athletic teams. Begun by sisters and girlfriends of Breck Seniors, the cheerleading team is now a regular part of school life. The team holds try-outs each year at Edina to replace the girls who have graduated. Through their perseverance and contagious enthusiasm, they have helped to instill in Breck a new found spirit. Those of us who were at the Homecoming game will not soon forget the sight of these girls standing in the rain and mud, cheering our team on to its hard-fought victory. For this, and many similar occasions, the Mustang Staff, along with the rest of the school, offers its thanks.

This year the Breck School basketball team, under the coaching of Tom Beech, began its climb back up to league supremacy. We choose an unfortunate time to start, however, since Minnehaha Academy had one of the strongest and best teams seen in this league for a long time which was able to beat several Minneapolis Public High School teams. Breck did, however, have one of its best season records in a long time beating Saint Paul Academy twice and Blake once. Our record was good enough, in fact, to earn us a spot in the Minnesota Independent School League Invitational Tournament. It was an unusually tough tournament, however, and the only prize Breck brought home was the honor of having Larry Nowlin, next year's team captain, picked by the league coaches to the all-tournament team.

This year was only the beginning though. With many fine starters returning and continued fine coaching the team will probably continue up the ladder of team standings to the top.

VARSITY HOCKEY

Of all the difficulties encountered by the Hockey squad this year, undoubtedly the greatest was that of simply finding a place to play. Early in the season the team spent both time and pocket money for morning practice at Blake's arena, and throughout the season we were plagued with shovel work on our own snow pond.

Throughout the season, however, in spite of shovelling and persistent injuries, the team showed the same spirit that seems to have permeated the entire school. The long hours and hard work paid off in two well-deserved dumps against Shattuck and Vocational.

With the development of the C-Squad and J.V., and hopefully with far better facilities in the offing, next year should see Breck with a powerful team ready to take on all comers.

"A" SQUAD WRESTLING

This year was a year of surprises for the 1967 wrestling team. Beginning the season with three non-conference victories and a win over last year's league champion, Minnehaha Academy, the outlook for the rest of the season was bright indeed. The Mustangs ran into some unusually tough competition however, and won only three of their remaining matches. This was attributed to various things, not the least of which was a seeming loss of spirit. The team bounced back, however, with the return of co-captain Jim Norton, who had broken his hand in the first match against Concordia, and the news that Roger Tobin did not really have mononucleosis. Throughout the time the team did not win a match, Bill Whitney and Chris Anderson carried the team through with consistent victories. In fact, Chris pinned every single opponent in the regular season. When the time for the tournament finally came the team was in excellent shape, mentally and physically, and as a result it took second place overall with three individual second place winners and three first place winners, a feat never before equaled in the history of Breck wrestling.

Something besides the spirit of this year's team was different, however. For the first time the wrestling team had the support of the entire school. The wrestling room, despite its heat and cramped accommodations, was consistently packed and Breck School had many more spectators and much more enthusiasm than any other school at the tournament. If next year's team, under co-captains Roger Tobin and Steve Wirth, has this same support, they have an excellent chance of bettering the performance of the 1967 team.

CHALLENGE

This winter, under the superb direction of Mr. Clements and Mr. Aarthun, Challenge became truly a challenge. While the entire program is taken in a humorous vein by everyone, it does provide physical exercise for those boys who either have not the physical ability or the time to participate in one of the other sports. This is the key to the entire challenge program. It is a way to give these boys a chance to keep fit and relax and enjoy doing it.

VARSIITY BASEBALL

The Breck baseball team, previously one of the consistent powerhouses in the league and the standing MISL champion team, started out the season with a spectacular dump over SPA and then faltered, not to pick up again until later in the season after another romp over Minnehaha Academy. Plagued with consistent errors and failure to hit in clutch situations, the team showed many bright spots during the season, most notably the pitching of Anderly, Nowlin, and Cederberg. Two points are important in assessing next year's prospects: at no time was Breck down by a sizeable margin, and nearly the entire team will be returning in the fall. We should have a strong team on the field; and with the errors cleaned up, we can look forward to a return to baseball glory.

GOLF

This season's golf team had one of the best win-loss records for Breck School in a number of years of the school's participation in this sport. Under the supervision of Mr. Ingersoll the team flourished and won several matches from teams reputed to be far better. Much of the credit for these accomplishments must go to Chris Anderson, the team's number one player, who won consistently throughout the season and lost his match for the league individual championship by the barest of margins. Backing up Chris were such fine underclassmen players as Todd Anderson, Mike Melander, and Forrest Peiper, all three of whom will be returning next year for another fine season in M.I.S.L. golf.

TENNIS

Once again this year the Breck tennis team failed to succeed in its bid for the Minnesota Independent School League championship. There was, however, a vast improvement over last year's team. This improvement was largely due to Coach Swenson's eagerness and his ambitions for a winning season. It was his influence that resulted in the team's playing and practicing tennis at the indoor North Star Tennis Club long before the snow had left the courts.

Although the team will miss the guidance of Coach Swenson and the fine playing of captain Rick White, it will not be lacking, since four out of seven of this year's starters will be returning next year to give the tennis team a bright future on the courts.

VARSITY TRACK

Members of the track team discovered this year that this was not to be a soft sport for gentleman goldbricks; coaches Neher, Clements, and Fronk meant business, and so did everyone else. A young, inexperienced team heated up the cinders of the world's only 390-yard, square-end track and ran and threw its way to becoming a strong MISL contender.

Long weak in distance running, it was here that the team had its greatest depth and improvement.

Especially noteworthy were the performances of Marshall Winchester in the mile and Brad Clary in the 880. Strongest in the dashes was Dave Strebel; and Roger Tobin, who is expected to be the conference champion in low hurdles next year, joined Strebel and Dick Barrett for performance honors.

The team will be back next year in full force with nearly all its outstanding members and is likely to return the school to its past reputation for track prowess.
